Uniform Modifications and Exemptions

Urangan State High School acknowledges the need for dress code modifications in certain situations, allowing students to attend with maximum compliance. This may include instances where students obtain permission to alter their appearance for charitable activities or when the current uniform poses challenges for students with disabilities.

Conscientious Exemptions
Some students or families may need exemptions due to exceptional circumstances.

Conscientious objection. Urangan State High School acknowledges conscientious objections, such as genuine religious or cultural reasons, to wearing school uniforms, allowing for individual modification or exemption requests.

Financial Hardship
Financial constraints may make buying school uniforms challenging for some families. Urangan State High School offers support to families experiencing genuine financial stress. Students can borrow loan uniforms until they can be purchased. Second-hand uniforms are also available at the P & C Uniform Shop. Alternatively, parents can apply for a flexible payment plan with the school's Business Manager if needed.

Pre-Existing Exemption or Modification
The Principal may grant an exemption or modification if a student had a dress code exception at their previous school before enrolling at Urangan State High School.

Application Process
Submit a written request for individual circumstances modification or exemption to the school Principal. The Principal may request additional information to verify the application's genuine basis. A written response, either approving or denying the application, will be provided promptly. The Principal's decision is final, and applicants will be treated fairly.

Consequences of Approval
If a student receives an individual circumstances modification or exemption, they'll be given a card outlining the granted changes. This exemption allows them to attend school without facing disciplinary consequences for uniform non-compliance. However, the student may still be restricted from non-essential school activities or representing the school if deemed necessary by the Principal. The student must carry and present the card if their uniform status is questioned, and failure to do so may lead to disciplinary action.
